

Keith Lilley is an historical geographer who specializes in the study of medieval urban landscapes. He has directed a number of research projects looking at towns and cities of the Middle Ages (eg. see www.qub.ac.uk/urban\_mapping/) and has written widely on the topic (eg. Urban Life in the Middle Ages, 1000-1450; City and Cosmos – the Medieval World in Urban Form). He is currently working on a new book called Urban Realms: Plantagenet Britain and the 'New Towns' of King Edward I. See www.qub.ac.uk/schools/gap/Staff/AcademicStaff/DrKeithLilley/ExtendedInformation/.